Ploch Farms

Vineland, NJ

The history of the Ploch family farm can be traced back to the 1800s when Ryan's great grandfather moved from Germany to northern New Jersey and started a dairy farm. In 1916, they converted to growing vegetables. With a large family, the Plochs sold the 9-acre farm to divide it up between everyone. Ryan's father and uncle moved to Vineland in 1973 and bought the land they're farming today.

Today, Ploch Farms is a cornerstone of the wholesale market in the region. John and his son Ryan farm about 250 acres with a focus on quality. They grow a wide variety of vegetables but are best known for their herbs and leafy greens.

THE REGION'S LEADING SOURCE FOR LOCAL.
