

Circle M Farm Salem, New Jersey

In 1910, Santo and Sara Maccherone came to America from Italy with the dream of one day owning a farm. After saving up, they purchased a farm in 1942.

Today, Santo John Maccherone (third generation) and his son John Maccherone (fourth generation) continue their family tradition of farming. The family shares a hard work ethic and hands-on approach to farming. Santo runs the packing shed; John works alongside the harvesting and picking teams to ensure that they're producing the freshest peaches possible. Circle M Farms grows peaches, nectarines, and plums. John works closely with the Rutgers agriculture and is working on a test crop of cherries.

You may have seen their ciders, jams, barbeque sauce, salsa, and jarred peaches in farmer markets.
